The inspection has assumed a new phase, which, if less dangerous to the empire, is not less embarrassing to newspaper correspondents. There is no longer a war in the Eastern Districts of the country, no central point on which the mind can rest as the one from which results, and consequently intelligence, are to be expected. Instead of one great campaign there are six little campaigns going on at once, each attending its own special end, and each, however, with a common aim, and, moreover, and each tending in some identical degree to the main object, the pacification of the country. The best mode, perhaps, of recording our progress is to sketch briefly, in outline, the progress of the fighting columns down the mountain towards the country. The most important of these, the column under General Walpole, has been tending its way towards Bareilly. Shortly after the middle of the month, the fighting column under the Chief, who entered Shahjehanpore without a battle, the Chief evacuating the town. Leaving a wing of his Majesty's 82nd, and half De Kaulow's Horse, to garrison the place, his Excellency, who is usually speedy, and from their ramified social connections must always be accurate, heard that Shahjehanpore was but indifferently garrisoned. The force he commandeered, consisting of 12,000 Sepoys, with 12 guns, by a rapid march surprised De Kaulow's Horse, cut up an outlying picket, drove the Europeans into the gaoth—the only fortified position at hand—and, after a short time, they proceeded to harass, and, according to our account, to execute many of the townspeople as the conceived or fancied had submitted willingly, varying the execution by the nature of the goods which were captured. The fighting column, which was then on the 6th drove the enemy posted outside the town into the city. The fighting is said to have been sharp, but we have few particulars, and your special correspondent, who was present, is not prepared to supply all details. Next day the city itself was captured, and by the 8th the Mahomedans had fled, and the city, and with it the control of Kohilzard, was in our hands. The Chief, however, is not prepared to proceed in accordance with arrangements long since made and carried out with the steady precision which he has contrived to impress upon his subordinates, received considerable reinforcements. Colonel Buxton, under the Chief's orders, when he last wrote was at Moradabad, reached Bareilly just in time to assist in its reduction. Two days previous Colonel Buxton, under Brigadier Penny, had reached the quiet recklessness which is as peculiar to the British officer as his contempt for tactics, rode with his staff at the head of his advanced guard. They were marching in the direction of the town, Koteh rowlie, a little place in the Budoun District, when a shower of grape checked the advance. Brigadier Penny was killed on the spot, and the Carabineers, who formed the advance, charged the gun. Behind it was a ditch filled with Ghazis, and many fanatics; and Captains Foster, Eckford, and Davies, were severely wounded. The ditch cleared, the column proceeded, and, as I said, arrived in time, but Brigadier Penny had been killed. It is believed that the majority of the fugitives have been for Bareilly, the north-eastern corner of Oude, and still exclusively in the hands of rebels. The Nana, however, with his cavalry, has been endeavouring to be supposed to have succeeded in making his way into Erawah, where a large body of cavalry is just now rallying. Mr. Hume.

Some apprehension is entertained that the rebels in Bareilly may make an attempt to reach Lucknow. The garrison of the city originally 8000 men, and a tributary part of the column with Lugard, and the whole of the column which, under Sir H. Grant, has proceeded to relieve Colonel Howcroft, who is now in the city, are in various stages of the great body of sepoy and rabble still collected in Fyzabad. If this body and the Bareilly rebels marched simultaneously on the city, Mr. Montgomery might have to leave the third stage of Lucknow.

On the 10th of May a very large body of troops, with infantry, cavalry, and artillery, were within seven miles of the city, which contained just 2000 effective Europeans. The rebels, however, they will hardly, however, venture on an attack. The people, it is believed, will aid them no more. Mr. Montgomery's acceptance of the zemindaree system has conciliated the holders, who have come in in numbers, and the peasantry will not stir. The city itself is being improved, and the inhabitants warned that, after a fixed date, their houses, unless they reconquer them, will become the property of the Government. It is believed that the intended destruction of Lucknow are all ridiculous. Nobody ever desired to throw away property worth some millions sterling, and which was the property of the Government. The darning of Delhi, though Mr. Moore has been appointed to execute it, meets with strong opposition; Sir John Lawrence, backed by a strong section of the Press, remonstrating against such waste of power.

During the morning we left Sir Hugh Rose with his two brigades halting at Pooneh, on the road to Calpee, apparently for ammunition. During the night a little force was sent out to reduce the petty fort named Koteh, some six miles to the west, and held by about 80 fanatics. The only approach was by a lane, commanded by the matofockmen, and as the stormers advanced, balls, spears, bricks, and stones were hurled at the heads of the men, however—50 of the 3rd Borneo Infantry, and 60 of the 25th Bombay Native Infantry, led by Major Gall, of his Majesty's 14th Dragons—held on gallantly. A powder-bag, improvised out of an old native pillow, was thrown at the gate it was blown in, and after a desperate hand-to-hand struggle the fanatics were put to the sword. Not one officer and scarcely one European escaped unscathed. Lieutenant Rose, who had been strong, of the 3rd Engineers, Lieutenant Rose, of the 25th Bombay Native Infantry, and Major Gall himself, all received sword cuts. On the 8th of May Sir H. Rose attacked the rebels' camp, some 10 miles from the petty fort named Koteh, and, though with a loss of some 60 men. The Rebels and her captives fled at the very beginning of the action, and on the 12th the General arrived at Dariz, within 10 miles of Calpee. There the rebel force of Bundelcund seems disposed to take their final stand. They have been hovering about that centre now for nearly eight months, but Sir Hugh Rose, in his extraordinary march from the other side of India, has not made a mistake or met with a reverse.

The sixth column, commanded by Sir H. Lugard, has practically settled the difficulty in Bihar. After a day, to be explained, I believe, by the river to the Ganges train, and the crossing of the enormous to Dehly. The rebel, about 2000 sepoy and 500 retainers from Jugsdapore, were encamped in a stretch of jungle, about 18 miles long, with a strip of land from Beecher to the point below Pooch. It was a heavy tree jungle, thickly covered by Koor Singh as his private hunting ground, and full of bears.

Colonel Corfield, commanding at Suseman, was ordered to come up with his men, 200 of his Majesty's 87th, and some 500 retainers from Jugsdapore, aware of the proposed junction, resolved to prevent it, and attacked General Lugard on the 8th. They were beaten, and retreated into the jungle. Next day the General entered the forest, and, after a short time, he drove the rebels flying to the south.

Jugsdapore he found the sepoy actively engaged in cutting brass cannon—a curious fact, which may help to explain the order of the cannon, but of course there of cannon taken in remote districts. On the 10th the General was actively pursuing, and hoped to be in time to prevent their passing the Sonahy. Koor Singh, according to native spies, died of his wound—shot in the thigh—and with him died the only leader of military skill whom this rebellion has produced. His second in command, Ramdoun, the rebel colonel of the 40th Native Infantry, was killed, and his place was taken by a poor fellow. This man, with the 40th Native Infantry, covered the retreat from Aizwagher, and his influence with his men is said to be unbounded. He can, at the present, induce them to keep square if they beat off the English Dragoons, and the first Asiatic have not often succeeded in accomplishing. The peasantry are said to be heartily sick of the consequences. They told a planter who bought some of Koor Singh's retainers, that if Koor Singh they must rise, for they were troubled by an oath, but that they were sick of the trouble he gave and the losses he had occasioned. Accordingly they did rise. But Koor Singh is in the forest, and the sepoy will drift away to their homes. They will be hunted down the principal difficulty being the weather. The season has been unusually hot; the lesser rains are on us unusually early. In the month of April, will illustrate the cost of a hot weather campaign.

Her Majesty's 36th—Officers killed: 1; died from camp (spleen); 2; killed; 8; wounded (but died from camp); 9; died from camp; 5; total, 19. Artillery—Killed; 3; died from camp; 1; total, 4.

Rattray's Sikhs—Killed; 7; wounded; 7; officers wounded (Captain Wetherby); 1; total, 15.

Queen is advised in all matters relating to the made, discipline, and patronage of the Navy responsible to Parliament. We cannot imagine ground can possibly be alleged for the distincbetween these offices and that of the Commander-in-Chief, and we suppose that none the least, and we suppose that none can not by justifying the distinction, but by deny-existence altogether. General Peel says that indirectly responsible for the acts of the Commander-in-Chief. But he is mistaken. He is in-Chief as to all matters relating to the to the Queen, and gives a distinct and binding upon them, or he is not so consulted, and does not such an opinion. In the former case he is responsible, and in the latter case he is not. The the question of responsibility whether he tender is desired that certain public offices should be gather irresponsible to Parliament, let us be told they are responsible, and let them be held they claim this perilous exemption; but do not allow ourselves to be trifled with by such verbielities as that one Minister is indirectly responsible, and another responsible because that Minister is indirectly responsible, and another responsible because that Minister is indirectly responsible. The ordinate in the matter in question the Minister has control whatever.

THE FUNDED DEBT OF GREAT BRITAIN.

In the House of Commons, on the evening of January 10, 1870, the following resolutions were passed by a large majority:— Resolved, That the House do not assent to the House to the introduction of any Bill for the House to the introduction of any Bill for the existing Acts, which gave the only security for reduction of the National Debt, in time of peace: tioning, in the course of his observations, that the Exchequer obtained the then Chancellor of the Exchequer to the principle that the hostilities be conducted as much as possible without entering financial burdens upon posterity. "Accordingly the House of Commons, in the year 1802, when was raised from taxation." Upon this topic the the following day remarks:

In the present rage for abstract propositions House of Commons might as well have recorded that the House of Commons is a body of men, other. There is, to say the least, quite as much herent morality and fundamental truth in the rule a nation should not charge its posterity for ever with the payment of its debts as in the rule that £10 householder should have a vote for the elect. Yet the House of Commons resignedly followed the proposition of the latter maxim into the labyrinth of the financial reform, and leaves financial in the lurch. Every man who has followed the of the financial question and against the Parliamentary. Mr. Wilson interposed at the moment when House was repelling a recent attempt to establish that the House of Commons is a body of men, and to speak out if ever. On this point Mr. Wilson said: "I am only anticipating, and, but for House of Lords, embarrassing, a discussion which subject was agreed to take very shortly on the subject of the National Debt, and so the House is the House that it tenders at once without any barren homage to the political virtues of a certain house, but only refuses to consider the question of the National Debt, and leaves financial these two courses to the House of Commons, biary facilities. "A blind admiration of Three per of the island, there is a general feeling, and a

DISTRICT OF NEW ENGLAND.

DISTRICT OF NEW ENGLAND.
That compact station MOORABAC, distant 30 miles from the port town of WALCHA, about 70 miles from Armidale, and within 80 miles of water carriage.

MORT and CO. have been instructed to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, at 11 o'clock, on TUESDAY, 19th October.

That capital station MOORABAC, situated in the district of New England, in the neighbourhood of the well-known station of C. D. Fewell, Esq. It consists of good open ridgy country, interspersed with flats, abundantly grassed, and well watered in the driest season, and ESTIMATED TO CARRY 1000 HEAD OF CATTLE.

THE IMPROVEMENTS consist of stockman's hut, stockyard, horse and civilization paddocks. With the Moon and Star brand will back 600 HEAD of CATTLE, more or less a mixed breed, quiet, and well-bred.

MORT and CO. would call attention to this compact little estate, which is adapted not only for fattening, but is also a grand place for a small family, and its proximity to the northern diggings, as well as to a good shipping port, give great additional advantage.

It is particularly worthy the notice of beginners. There is a small consignment of choice Leinster wine.

THE GEM OF DARLING POINT.

THE ESTATE OF AYVOCA, subdivided into 13 BEAUTIFUL BUILDING SITES, varying in extent from about a quarter of an acre up to one and a half acre each.

TERMS Unquestionable.

THEY

MORT AND CO. have been instructed to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, at 11 o'clock, on WEDNESDAY, 13th October, THE ESTATE OF AVOCA, DARLING POINT.

* * This splendid property has just been most carefully surveyed and subdivided into building sites, great attention having been paid to the topographical features, in order to make each block perfect in itself.

BLOCK No. 1 immediately adjoins Winslow, the property of Captain Pike, and has a large frontage to the Darling Point Hotel, and is an area of about ONE AND A HALF ACRES, and is, beyond doubt, the finest building site on Darling Point.

BLOCK No. 2 adjoins No. 1, and has a frontage of BLOCK No. 10, 11 and 12 have a frontage of about 150 feet to Darling Point Road, by a similar frontage to the Upper Road from Rusheuter's Bay to the DARLING POINT ROAD.

BLOCK No. 13, 14, 15 and 16 have all frontages of from 100 feet to 150 feet to the Upper Road, and vary in extent from about a QUARTER OF AN ACRE TO HALF AN ACRE EACH.

BLOCKS 5, 6, 10 and 11 front a reserved road, to which the lots are from 70 feet to 150 feet each, and the AREA OF UPWARDS OF A QUARTER OF AN ACRE EACH.

BLOCK No. 12 has a frontage of about 280 feet to the Upper Road from Rusheuter's Bay to the Darling Point ROAD, and has a frontage of about 150 FEET OF AN ACRE. Upon it stands AVOCA COTTAGE.

There are 12 lots in the subdivision, and the lots are stone rubble building, containing 5 rooms, with kitchen attached, built of weatherboards; also a good cow shed, &c. The cottage is in excellent order, ready for immediate occupancy.

THE ESTATE OF AYVOCA is bounded on one side by the Darling Point Road, and on the other by the upper road to it from Enabuckers Bay, which latter divides the estate from AYBEE, the property of the late SIR THOMAS FITZGERALD, and is bounded on the other by the THOMAS FITZGERALD ROAD, which latter is bounded by the most valuable properties in that neighborhood.

Famous as this charming locality is for building sites, which CANNOT PERHAPS BE SURPASSED IN THE WORLD, a single visit to it will carry the conviction that the name of Ayvoa is justly termed THE GEM OF THE POINT.

With an elevation sufficient to command the most expenative and beautiful view of the Harbour and the surrounding country, great care has been taken in subdividing the land into small lots, and in erecting the buildings with sufficient space for the erection of a first-class office and out-offices, &c. The whole of them have extensive frontages to, and are approached by, good roads, and from the nature of the ground but little expense will be entailed in their construction.

The public are requested to visit the property prior to the sale, and judge for themselves. No more description in an advertisement can do justice to the great natural beauties of the sites now offered for public competition; to the views of the Harbour, the surrounding country, and the view, therefore, that intending purchasers are invited to an inspection. The advantages of securing such building positions will then become apparent, and that attraction and competition secured for it which the property really deserves.

Plan on view at the Rooms, Pitt-street, where, also, lithographs of the property may be obtained

In the Intestate Estate of the late Mr. William Harrow, of Applin.

Important and Unreserved Sale at Applin, on TUESDAY!
October 12th.

he did not know what my statement was, what it contained, and whether it was a suggestion proper—but that having given the appendix, an item of evidence, and a noble and no suspicious as possible. I took it to be a statement of fact. Mr. Gordon's own explanation of the matter; he went on to say last night that, when I was asked if I had any further information to give the committee, I produced a paper which was the appendix, a part of my statement, and that he suggested the committee could not receive it as evidence, but that it might be received as an appendix. He again suggested that I should write out the information which I had to give, and make it that it should form an appendix to my statement. Mr. Gordon then suggested, before he heard the statement read—before he knew what it was—that I should make it an appendix. Now, as Mr. Gordon draws a distinction between evidence and appendix, and between evidence and suggestion, what principle of honour or justice he could suggest that I should make it an appendix, I do not know. Of the nature of evidence proper, or only of an appendix, that I should consent to place it before the committee and the Assembly and the public in the form of an appendix, I do not know. Was it because it was an entangled form of appendix? Was it because it was a criminal form of appendix? Was it because

Now I do not at all intend to the latter part of the recommendation that the Legislature refuse to make a deed of grant has been corrected; but the other part of the recommendation, viz, that the Legislature should withhold its sanction until steps have been taken de novo. This, I confess, appears to me most unwarrantable and unjust, and one now likely to be proved to have sought to be attained by the Legislature. For what good result can reasonably be expected to follow from beginning the thing de novo if the committee are of opinion that, if the matter were brought de novo, as they recommended, it would be covered by the same objections? The Whigians could consistently cooperate in carrying out the object of the Colleges Act, there might be some sense in the recommendation, but I cannot see what ground there is for such a belief. I hold that the committee in making the recommendation have been misled by what good end was gained by adopting it. To recommend the Legislature to withhold from the Presbyterians their ferred to his having given the case over to Dr. Buchanan. Mr. Graham gave witness a certificate, ascribing death to malignant core ulcers; and Dr. Buchanan, testifying that the death of the child was from severe asphyxia. The father of deceased (Robert McCade, a mariner) supported his wife's evidence, additionally stating that Dr. O'Brien saw the child, and ascribed death to asphyxia, on the basis of facts about the middle of the week before last; and that when he found the case to have taken place he felt it was a case for a coroner's inquest. Further evidence was given to show that the father was proper in not having the child under his skill. The medical evidence by (Mr. Wandooek) showed that the deceased—a five child, and well-conditioned—had signs of recent inflammatory action about the entrance to the throat; there was a deep-seated injury to the left foot; and the skin of the right arm was severely injured by the application of a suppurating. Internally, there was evidence of a congested state, and recent inflammation, but not of ulceration, in the mucous membrane lining the lips and cheeks and over the base of the tongue, and, posteriorly, over the palate.
